 I'd post photos, but you'll have to wait for my autobiography.

trollcatz, as crazy streaky punked-out redhead = totally awesome. As anyone would have known if they'd thought about it for five minutes. She bailed on the skirt (chicken!) but the gray blouse looked hawt with jeans, and hey, way to meet a girl halfway, ya know? (She'da looked slayin in the skirt, but she looked slayin anyway.)

Sad, sad--no test of Mom's facial expression there. This morning it was a brown-haired (tho slightly different from Friday) harpy at the desk. Win a few, lose a few. But hey, now she can't say she doesn't know how to dye her hair (g). Wonder what she's been saying when people ask, "Hey, did you color your hair?"

Bet if T'd been home she'd still be a redhead. Note to self: next time, wait for backup.

cvillette--yes, the one you've all been waiting for. Photos would not do the Platypus justice. Let me just say, not everyone can wear black eyeshadow. Or dark red lipstick. Or undertaker-black coat. Hand me my fan, baybee, cos the room just heated up.

Also more residual effect. Yeah, that mascara is hard to get off. That's cool; except for the little flakes, it'll pass for not-enough-sleep dark circles. The black fingernail polish defies explanation, though. It's only half picked off. I think I'll take pity and pass on some nail polish remover in a bit.

The mouth looks kind of interestingly bruised. Mom's facial expression: indescribable. Cos Mom mostly isn't used to doing facial expression, so you have to rely on micro-tells. Dad, amusingly, looked as if he'd expected something like this all along. Darn profilers.

And I get dinner at the churrascaria. Oh, yeah. Even the most oblivious Platypus (which this one is not) would have figured out the swarming behavior. A little scary, you know?

Oh, and I looked good. But then, that is not news.

Dude! "Cinderella" is one of the patriarchy's most toxic myths!

Fact, that.

And I wouldn't want that fairy godmother gig, anyway.

I might even let you borrow it sometimes. That is, if I were to happen to have one.

Oh, she's not so bad. That space alien in the cape has turned her head, is all.

Re: Psst. Look familiar?

I am such a loser.

My first thought on seeing that video: "Did she clean her bathroom special for that? It's way too clean..."

*explanatory note!

trolcatz's third law of human behavior: Pretty girls have dirty bathrooms. Prettier the girl, the dirtier the bathroom.

Re: Psst. Look familiar?

Hmm.

I will have to get into the bathrooms of some pretty girls and investigate.

She *is the alternative Martha Stewart. One would expect cleanliness.
